

Now is the Time for Americans to Prepare with ReadyWise

SALT LAKE , UTAH, UNITED STATES, February 18, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Americans need to stay ready for what's ahead. Although global tensions threaten America's national security, like North Korea and Russia threatening war with international nuclear missiles, there is trouble within the United States, and not enough people are talking about it. This month, America witnessed the 2023 chemical train derailment in Ohio along the Norfolk South Railway. Toxic chemicals like vinyl chloride were leaked into the air, water, and soil, causing contamination, with people reporting troubled breathing, dying animals, and more since the federal government deemed it safe for locals to come back. These ramifications can and will impact Americans' health, water, and food for decades. This further shows that the measures a government or state takes to protect its citizens, territory, and institutions from internal and external threats can be unreliable.

Effective emergency preparedness is essential for protecting people, communities, and infrastructure from harm and ensuring a rapid and coordinated response to emergencies. It can take a long time to repair damaged essential services, such as power, water systems, and communication, so it's important to stock up with the essentials like emergency food, water storage and filtration, and backup power.

READYWISE®

Drew Brees partnered with ReadyWise to spread the important message of emergency preparedness

ReadyWise, the leading manufacturer of emergency food supplies, offers a wide range of products designed for various emergencies, including natural disasters, industrial disasters, power outages, and outdoor use. Their products are packaged to provide a long-term shelf life of up to 25-year shelf life, making them exceptional for emergency preparedness. Drew Brees recently partnered with ReadyWise to help get friends and neighbors prepared and spread the important message of emergency preparedness. Now everyone can stock up with ReadyWise's lowest prices of the year during their President's Day Sale. Preparing before disaster strikes is crucial because panic buying is the last thing to do during an emergency. This gives people a chance to get ahead of increased prices and prepare their households in times of uncertainty.

It's essential to take the time and create a kit with your family that includes all the essentials or shop these pre-packed survival bags from ReadyWise that are critical for evacuation-type scenarios. These recent ecological and industrial disasters left families with minimum time to evacuate because of the harmful toxins. The idea behind a bug-out bag is to have a portable kit that can provide for basic needs, such as food, water, shelter, and first aid, in the event of a disaster or other crisis. ReadyWise offers the Ultimate 3-Day Emergency Survival Backpack. Tailoring the contents of a bug-out bag to your specific needs is important. That means personal documents, medications, or preparing for specific natural disasters in your region.

In the case of a shelter-in-place scenario, they also offer food solutions like 1-month, 3-month, 6-month, and 1-year emergency food packages to keep people stocked up. They are offering their best prices now, so it's the perfect time to stock up and get prepared today. To learn more, go to www.readywise.com.
