An antihypertensive topical medication called minoxidil encourages hair growth. In addition to being utilised as an off-label treatment for other hair loss diseases, minoxidil is primarily given for treating androgenetic alopecia. The 2% and 5% solutions of minoxidil, both of which are FDA-approved, were initially introduced to the market in 1986 and 1993, respectively, and are primarily used to promote hair growth. The prevalence of severe androgenetic alopecia (AGA) varies greatly by geographic region, with a global frequency of 15.33% as of August 2015, according to the National Center for Biotechnology Information (NCBI). For people between the ages of 30 and 40, the probability of having severe androgenetic alopecia (AGA) increased by 1.092 each year.
