Award Winning Comedy Short Film, Little Package

"Little Package" tells the story of a family that gets themselves into hot water after a mysterious package shows up on their front porch by accident. Meanwhile, the owners of the package, which turn out to be on the shady side, attempt to salvage the little package before their boss finds out.

We believe that everyone handles stress differently, and this film explores those differences in a lighthearted and entertaining manner.”

Kent Smith

Directed by Kent Smith (The Last Passport) and starring Johanna Jowett (Life as We Know It), Jason Allen King (The Hunger Games), and Patrick G. Keenan (The Blind Side), "Little Package" has won multiple awards, including Best

Short Film at the Foothills Film Festival and the Stranger Days Independent Film Festival, as well as Audience Award at the Charlotte Film Festival. The film has been praised for its powerful storytelling, compelling performances, and striking visuals.

"We are thrilled to bring 'Little Package' to a wider audience on YouTube," said Kent Smith, producer/director/co-writer of the film. "This film has resonated with audiences around the world, and we hope that it will continue to make people laugh and surprise viewers on YouTube."

Kent Smith, explained his creative vision by expressing his desire to find comedy in the situation at hand, drawing inspiration from Stanley Kubrick's "Dr. Strangelove or: How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb". He aimed to infuse suspense in a manner reminiscent of Alfred Hitchcock's "Rear Window" and to present hard life decisions in a comedic way like a John Hughes films, all in service of developing the characters' personalities.

Acknowledging the varied ways people handle stress, he sought to create unique cinematic views that would heighten the sense of unease and anxiety as the story's tension played out mostly in the characters' minds. When the mysterious package arrives, Smith aimed to intensify the tension with faster cuts while staying true to the comedic nature of the situation.

The film was based on a true story and written by Kent Smith and Christian Shonts. Steve Saxon served as the Director of Photography, and despite Covid-related limitations, we were able to shoot the film in just three days with a dedicated crew.
