"The Writing Your Story inaugural dinner brings creators together to network, share insights on industry trends, while growing friendships and business relationships in an intimate and upscale environment. Seeing women (and men) gather in such a supportive space is what the ExV Agency has excelled at for years. We are so happy to be doing live events again, that brings executives together, in such a beautiful setting. There was no better time to gather these incredible individuals than the start of Women's History Month," said Karen Gamba, CEO of the ExV Agency.

ExV Agency CEO, Karen Gamba, and COO, Frank Carlisi have worked in the PR and events space for more than 20 years. Following the pandemic, it was important for the agency to focus on intimate events that encouraged people to get back to connecting and growing relationships. "It turns out that many people are introverts, and networking became an even bigger challenge after comfortably working from home and not having to gather with strangers, during the pandemic," added Frank Carlisi, "our bespoke events offer professionals a safe space to connect with people that do what they do, love what they love and share career advice together, without the intimidation of large events."

"I was selected for an ExV Agency, "Writing Your Story" dinner in Atlanta and was instantly blown away by each and every one of the talented and powerful women handpicked to attend the special evening at Nobu. Hosted by the incredible Karen Gamba, the event was thoughtfully planned and beautifully executed. Everyone in the room was given time to tell their own stories, workshop ideas, share insights, and create lasting relationships. Karen essentially turned a group of strangers into long-term connections in just a few hours over a fantastic dinner spread! I highly recommend anything Karen and the ExV Agency team puts together. It will not disappoint!" shared Michelle Cohan, Features Editor, CNN.
