Its founder while working for the tradeshow industry previously, hosting 30,000 B2C and B2B business owners at any given event, in 35 major cities around the United States, and after speaking to thousands of founders and CEO's, realized early in his career that they had a problem. He found that the problem for business owners no matter the size of their company, is that owners can come up with a great product and put their product in the marketplace, but a majority of them, when speaking candidly, cannot tell you exactly where their customers are coming from or who they are. This in returned proved that not knowing precisely who their customers are, will result in not knowing how to get those people to their product and website.
