Dr. Natasha’s upbringing extends back to Detroit, which is known as the Motor City. It is also known to have one of the highest crime rates in America compared to all communities of all sizes — from the smallest towns to the very largest. From a backdrop of lawlessness, poverty, and drugs, Dr. Weems emerged and beat the odds. She is thankful to God and attributes her faith in Christ for the level of success that she has achieved.

As an influencer, her mission is to inspire other women to build a career as well. According to Dr. Weems, in celebration of National Women's Day, "We also reflect on the importance of encouraging and uplifting young women and girls so they can chase their goals and dreams. To those young women — you are amazing, you are strong, and you can accomplish anything you set your mind to."

With a true servant's heart she continues, "It is with true dedication and intent I'll pursue my desire to make a difference in the lives of young women across the world and particularly in my hometown Detroit. Women who have been perpetually pushed aside and often forgotten by society, the women who have been abused and ignored, have remained unheard. This population is not worldly rich, but their spirits are rich. I believe that these women are rich in fortitude and spirit, and I believe that it is my purpose to help them recognize that in themselves and in each other."

About: Dr. Natasha Weems realized she had the desire to serve at the early age of 18 when she became a nursing assistant. That was the launching pad for her to reach the trajectory she is on today. She received a bachelor's degree in communication from Wayne State University, followed by a Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) from Oakland University in 2009. Four years later, she became a Qualified Nurse Practitioner in 2013. She ultimately received a Master of Science in Nursing (MSN) degree, and a doctorate in Nursing (DNP).
