Definition:

Visual effects (VFX) services are a set of techniques used in filmmaking, video production, and other media to create realistic, fantastical, or imaginary scenes or elements that cannot be captured on camera during filming. These techniques involve the integration of live-action footage with computer-generated imagery (CGI), digital compositing, and 3D modeling to create special effects, visual enhancements, and complex animations. VFX services are typically provided by specialized studios that employ VFX artists, animators, compositors, and other professionals who are skilled in creating and integrating visual effects into film and video projects.
