LTR benefits all R&R Express customers by providing them expanded customizable supply chain solutions ... A good fit that helps both organizations continue to provide best-in-class customer support.”

Richard S. Francis, R&R Express CEO

Companies is proud to announce the acquisition of Load to Ride (LTR), a regional and national transportation leader and logistics provider based in Denver, Colorado.

LTR's fleet of more than 100 trucks and 200 trailers expands the R&R Express fleet to better serve customers and provides faster transport initiation and overall transit times. The expanded terminal network includes a gateway to the west coast, including California, for cross-dock services and short-term storage.

LTR's warehouse in Denver, yard for storage, and truck repair shop help keep the R&R Express fleet on the road and maintained to the highest possible safety standards.

This acquisition provides LTR's customers with a larger national network of carriers for a more sophisticated, technologically advanced transit approach. This results in a more cost-efficient fleet and more stable pricing for customers.

“This acquisition helps strengthen our world-class customer service and provides more logistical and transport options to our customers,” says Richard S. Francis, R&R Express CEO. “LTR benefits all R&R Express customers by providing them with expanded customizable supply chain solutions. This expansion is a good fit that helps both organizations continue to provide best-in-class customer support.”

More About R&R Express
