Students participating in Rustic Pathways travel programs around the world.

The students in the inaugural 2022 Travel for All class traveled and served in Peru, Morocco, and Costa Rica. One scholar aspires to work in public health internationally and is making this a reality at Stanford University on a pre-med track; another scholar aspires to become a surgeon. Additionally, Rustic Pathways has also worked to create opportunities for Scholar recipients by inviting them to join leadership development programs that help develop a wide range of skills.

"These initiatives provide us the opportunity to empower young adults to experience the world. We are thrilled to be supporting Rustic Pathways' Travel for All Scholars this year," says Carlo E. Fabros, Business Development Manager at StudentUniverse.

Since 2017, Rustic Pathways and The Rustic Pathways Foundation has committed over $1MM in scholarships and financial aid to students and impact causes.

Scott Ingram, Director of Admissions adds, "This group of students exemplify how Travel For All amplified the impact of young changemakers around the world when we broaden access to the innovative educational experiences offered by Rustic Pathways. I can't wait to see how their experiences power their capacity to create meaningful change in their communities and the world."
