Hybrid Electric Car Market

This audience is more aware of the problems surrounding emissions. Similar issues will likely to be regulated by the exact same regulatory bodies. This will force OEMs to make hybrid and electric cars. These vehicles emit very low levels of greenhouse gases, which is good for the environment. However, gasoline and diesel vehicles create more pollution.

Due to increased competition, the hybrid Car market is experiencing a sharp rise in demand for both fuel cell electric vehicles (FCEVs), and battery electric cars (BEVs). There are many types of BEVs, and each model has different in-built and build features. This is why major automotive companies such as the USA, China and Germany are focusing on developing different BEV models.
