Cardiac biomarkers testing is a group of blood tests that are used to diagnose and evaluate different heart conditions. Biomarkers are substances in the blood that can indicate the presence of disease or damage to the heart muscle.

The most commonly used cardiac biomarkers are troponin, creatine kinase (CK), and myoglobin. Troponin is considered the most specific and sensitive biomarker for cardiac injury, and it is released into the bloodstream when there is damage to the heart muscle. Elevated levels of troponin can be a sign of a heart attack or other serious heart condition.
