Recycling of paper is expected to be a key trend in sanitary paper product manufacturing. In the paper industry, there is a rise in recycling due to environmental issues like deforestation and an increase of waste. Recycled tissues require 50% less water, 64% less energy and make 74% less air pollution, which not only decreases the cost for the companies but also supports the sustainability of the environment. For instance, in December 2022, Huhtamaki, a Finland-based consumer packaging company, launched ICON® packaging, a cutting-edge, recyclable ice cream packaging solution in the US that is made with 95% renewable biobased material and allows recycling in localities around the country that have paper product recycling programmes. This makes it possible to recycle the ice cream cartons and lids alongside other paper goods like folded carton packaging.
