Herbal tea is made by boiling or steeping herbs, and is an infusion made from a plant other than Camellia sinensis. Flower tisanes such as chamomile, lavender, hibiscus, and rose are usually used for making herbal teas. Even leaf tisane such as mint, lemongrass, French verbena, and lemon balm can be used for making herbal teas. Other tisanes used to blend herbal tea are root tisanes, fruit tisanes, and seed or spice tisanes. Unlike coffee and true teas (which are also available decaffeinated), most tisanes do not contain caffeine naturally. The global Herbal tea market accounted for US$ 3267.65 Million in 2020 and is estimated to be US$ 5042.22 Million by 2030 and is anticipated to register a CAGR of 4.5%.

Key Highlights:

- In November 2018, Nestlé launched the first product developed by its new incubator team in China. Xingshan is a new brand of ready-to-drink herbal drinks and soups made with traditional Chinese ingredients, for busy urban professionals.
- In February 2019, Nestle announced that KitKat Green Tea Matcha is inspired by one of the most popular of the 350 KitKat varieties that have been available in Japan over the years. The brand is a household name there, popular for gifting and with tourists looking for an interesting souvenir.

Analyst View:

High caffeine levels in the body are expected to cause prolonged ailments because of which a number of medical practitioners are condemning its widespread usage. Since, herbal tea is free of caffeine; the market is experiencing heavy demand consumers in the current times. As customers become increasingly wary of their health, herbal products have become the watchword of the people. This has given a boost to the market for herbal tea and has created growth spaces for competitors. Furthermore, the autoxidizing properties of herbal tea have also led to their usage amongst a large part of the population. Owing to the fat-burning properties of this tea, the rise of the health industry has underhandedly contributed to the growth of the market.

Growing usage of green tea in beauty and skin treatments

Green tea has catechins, which make it anti-bacterial. It is, thus, used in curing acne and regulating hormonal imbalances. The main benefit of green tea in this regard is that it protects one from skin cancer due to its anti-oxidant properties. It contains several antioxidants as well as enzymes, amino acids, and phytochemicals like polyphenols along with vitamin B, folate, manganese, potassium, magnesium, and caffeine. Green tea is found helpful in flushing out toxins from our body, thus doing natural detoxification. It aids in healing blemishes and scars, reduces inflammation, and enhances the skin's elasticity.
