The paper pulp market is the global trade in raw materials used to manufacture paper and related products. Paper pulp is composed of wood pulp, recycled paper, or agricultural fibers which have been chemically or mechanically processed into paper.

Paper pulp demand is driven by the growth in paper and packaging industries, as well as increasing demands for tissue, hygiene and other paper products. Furthermore, environmental concerns have an impact on this market since pulp production can lead to deforestation and pollution. As such, there has been a rise in demand for sustainable paper pulp products made from recycled materials or agricultural fibers.
