Manufacturers in the hormonal contraceptives market should abide by many strict regulations about labeling hormonal contraceptives, and are all supervised by regulatory authorities. For instance, the US FDA has drafted a new set of guidance and labeling recommendations in the hormonal contraceptives market. The main purpose of PLR is to enhance the safety and usage of the particular prescribed drug by providing healthcare providers with clear prescription information (PI). The FDA mandates all hormonal contraceptives to mention the effectiveness of the drug in preventing STDs and any other relevant information regarding the effectiveness of the drug. The FDA considers that communicating information regarding pregnancy rates to the users of these contraceptive drugs is essential for safety and effective usage.
