“Pakistan needs to be saved from the current economic turmoil. The United States has always supported the country and so was the same reciprocated. Over the past few decades, the relationship between the United States and Pakistan has been complex and multifaceted. Despite significant US investment in civilian aid and military assistance, the relationship has been marked by periods of tension and mistrust. This trust deficit has not been addressed properly by both sides. Pakistan remained a key member of the US-led Defense treaties, namely the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization (SEATO) and the Central Treaty Organization (CENTO). Pakistan played an important role in the Sino American relationship in the early 1970s. The country remained a key U.S. ally in war against the Soviets in Afghanistan.

Abraham accords and peace missions in the Middle East cannot survive without the active engagement of Pakistan. Pakistan’s support in establishing an inclusive government in Afghanistan and contain massacre of Uyghur Muslims in China is vital for regional peace. A reciprocity in providing economic relief to the country is immediately needed for which we stand by Pakistan and the people of Pakistan”, said Dr. Gholam
