“The design of this space provides cutting-edge legal technology and comfort to our attorneys and clients,” said Michael Berger, Founding Partner and Principal at Berger Schatz. “The moment you enter our new office you will recognize that this design is unlike your standard law firm office and how they have been structured for generations.”

Located on the thirty-third floor at 161 North Clark Street — just five floors up from the Chicago Loop offices Berger

Schatz occupied for more than two decades — the new offices feature multiple large conference rooms, breakout areas, family rooms, and an open-concept kitchen. In addition to inviting collaboration and promoting connection, the space will utilize a hotel-style booking system allowing employees to set their own schedules and work in the most appropriate environment.

“We wanted to create a space that has all the amenities of an office, with the comfort of a home,” said Marcy Kott, Principal at Berger Schatz. “For clients, we focused on cultivating a warm and inviting space that provides discreteness and privacy.”

Berger Schatz worked solely with Chicago-based businesses when designing and building the new space. BIG Construction was hired for project management and general contracting, and Charlie Greene Studio handled all of the design.
