

Swinging to a Latin Beat at the Church of Scientology Los Angeles

The Jive Aces, Britain's No. 1 swing band, performed at a Guatemalan spring festival on L. Ron Hubbard Way in L. A. while in the city for their 2023 U.S. tour.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, March 30, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- East Hollywood was rocking last weekend when the Jive Aces stepped to the stage on L. Ron Hubbard Way to perform for families gathered for a festival to welcome spring.

They took advantage of a brief respite from the rainiest year for Southern California since 1983.

Perhaps it was their own brand of magic that held the storm clouds at bay. After all, this is the jive and swing band famous for their viral cover of the old standard "Bring Me Sunshine." Their video is so catchy and cheerful, one doctor even prescribes it as a way to cure the blues.

Guatemalan, Mexican and Panamanian dancers, whose traditional folkloric performances were the centerpiece of the festival, joined in the fun, kicking up their heels to the rhythms of the Jive Aces tunes.

"Our purpose is to play and perform for people, cheer them up, move them, and make them
