LOS ANGELES, CA, USA, March 30, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The recording artist, Akeem Loves You, the rising star from Los Angeles, California, has just released a new music video that is garnering attention and making many U.S. banks quite nervous. The video for his hit single "Shoe Box" is an educational and irreverent take on the current state of the U.S. banking system.

What better way to cope with financial instability in these uncertain times than to put your money in a shoebox! That's precisely what Akeem Loves You illustrates and attempts to educate his listeners in his latest music video. The lyrics to "Shoe Box" are a testament to the artist's unique style and wit. "Put your money in the shoe box. It's the safest place, you know. Bank failures left and right, but my shoe box still holds the dough." The video comes at a time when people are suffering financially from the economy and are looking for answers and solutions.

"Shoebox" was written and recorded during the height of the banking crisis and features Akeem rapping about how he'd like to put his money in a shoe box instead of a bank account. The song is now available on streaming services everywhere.

The lyrics will resonate with anyone who lost money in the recession or saw their life savings disappear due to shady investments from big banks. In perfect timing, Akeem Loves You has released the song "Shoebox" to help us through these difficult financial times.
