The first episode of the film series premiered at The Cheech, with two viewings followed by a Q & A session with Cortez, the artist herself. Open to Altura Members and invited guests, attendees included the Mayor of Moreno Valley, Ulises Cabrera; members of local car club Ride N Pride; and artists from the Eastside Arthouse, a Riverside-based gallery and artist collective.

“I feel super grateful and honored for my story to be shared and celebrated in this way,” Cortez said. “There’s so many other artists like me, just like me, that just want the opportunity to share their art in this grand way.”

“Your Story: Voices of Impact” is the beginning of a long series of short films highlighting a variety of individuals in Riverside County making profound changes in their communities. The full episode became available to the public to view the following week and is now available on Altura's YouTube channel.
