Not only does Utah have an abundance of asbestos contaminated mines where workers were subject to dangerous exposure for decades, but the state also contains seven known naturally-occurring asbestos deposits. In addition, asbestos-contaminated vermiculite from W.R. Grace's notorious mine in Libby, Montana was processed in two facilities near Salt Lake City and in one refinery in Richfield, UT. Residents of Utah who worked in the mining, petroleum and chemical industries are at an increased risk of developing mesothelioma and/or an asbestos-related lung cancer. www.mesotheliomaoptions.com
