This innovative approach to cooking pits two contestants in the kitchen against each other, recreating some of the world’s most iconic, classic dishes using only a hot plate. Morgan Creates Beyond The Plate

Seasoned home cooks put their culinary talents to work creating a savory masterpiece, hoping to claim the grand prize and be crowned the Beyond the Plate champion. Challenges can range from common items like sliders, pastas, and quick bites to even more exotic dishes. At the finale, judging is based on taste, presentation, and creativity.

Each fun-enthused TV episode has an urban flare setting and promises to have something for everyone, from the amateur cook to the sophisticated foodie. Cooking has historically been an activity that brings folks together from the preparation to the consumption of it. Watching food television is a popular American pastime and provides good, clean fun for the entire family. In future sessions, kids will be the contestants partnered with an adult from past seasons.
