The ability to achieve good oral health and access quality dental services has become increasingly difficult and unaffordable for millions of patients across the United States. With rising costs of dental treatment coupled with hikes in the cost of living, many consumers find themselves making tough decisions when presented with both elective and non-elective dental procedures. The impact of good oral health on the general health is well established in both the dental and medical communities and Teledentistry has presented significant headway in helping increase access to dental care. Dental financing has traditionally helped millions of patients receive the care they needed in the brick-and-mortar dental setting and now aims to provide the same benefits to patients who are seeking dental care remotely through the utilization of Telemedicine.

“As a practicing dentist I have had the pleasure of working with Alphaeon Credit in my dental offices for many years and have offered their services to my patients to help alleviate the financial pressures of dental procedures. It’s now my unique pleasure to with Tony Seymore and his amazing team at Alphaeon Credit to help expand their reach to millions of patients across the nation outside of the dental office setting through Dentulu’s platform,” explains Dr. Arash Hakhamian, co-founder and CEO of Dentulu. “Both Dentulu and Alphaeon recognize the benefits of providing affordable payment options to dental patients and it’s tremendous role in helping improve the quality of patient care. We are equally excited to work together to provide ongoing innovations and improvements in how we deliver our services to our clients with the ultimate goal of helping patients and the providers that service them.”

Dentulu has established innovative marketing channels with companies like Walgreens and LG televisions to provide new ways for patients to experience Teledentistry and access dental services. Patients can access Dentulu Teledentists on their mobile phones, tablets, computers and even smart televisions where they will be able to seek various dental procedures from the comfort of their home. Dentulu Teledentists work closely with local dental offices to whom they refer their patients for additional treatment and to ensure comprehensive care to their patients. Alphaeon clients can access a large network of dental offices where members can utilize their financing to receive dental care for any dental services they may require. Patients will be able to get pre-approved after qualification based on their credit worthiness. Once approved, they will be able to access various payment plan options on dental care that they need.

Dentulu’s decision to choose Alphaeon to partner with in providing patient financing stems from the company’s stellar reputation, great customer service, and expanding opportunities to approve a large audience of patients with various credit ratings. In addition to the ability to pre-
