Market Dynamics:

A growing number of people are becoming more sedentary and consuming less healthy food is making them more susceptible to various chronic diseases such as heart disease, stroke, diabetes, strokes, atherosclerosis, and heart disease. These are the main factors expected to drive the dietary supplement market revenue growth over the next ten years.

People are increasingly turning to dietary supplements due to the dramatic changes in their eating habits and lifestyles. These factors are expected to increase market growth in the future for the global industry.

Market growth for this industry is expected to be complemented by the growing awareness about sarcopenia (the gradual decline/loss in muscle strength, mass, and function due to aging).

Due to the recent COVID-19 epidemic, many industries were forced to suspend or have a reduced workforce. This is expected to have a negative effect on revenue growth in the dietary supplement market. Over-consuming dietary supplements can cause side effects such as nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea. This could also limit the market's revenue growth in the near future.

However, the dietary supplements market will see increased growth due to the increasing collaborations between industry players and research institutes in order to create more efficient and better-quality supplements.
