Snaresbrook Manor, available for luxury rentals, is the Bahamian estate of fashion designer, Patricia Nash.

Located on the Bahamian island of Eleuthera, near Governor's Harbour, Snaresbrook Manor is decorated and furnished with pieces from Patricia Nash's personal collection of art, artifacts, furniture and textiles imported from around the world.

The dining room table and kitchen bar were hand crafted from reclaimed mahogany discovered in a 500-year-old home in upstate New York. The estate beautifully blends the classic air of Bahamian casual living with the timeless elegance of leather, wood and textures. Handcrafted tables and antiques from Italy and London serve as interesting conversation pieces throughout the home. Antique Italian mirrors, fine imported rugs and neoclassical style midcentury lamps and candlesticks personally curated from Europe and United States blend to create a truly unique interior.

Wall coverings include original vintage and antique art from around the world. An original photograph from famous African photographer, Jamie Thorn, is on display. A series of AE Bachus Bahama landscape canvas pieces, purchased from his museum, line the halls of the west suite. Lillian August Baroque Bouquet prints line the dining room wall. And original vintage movie posters from the 1950's- 1990's bring life to the in-home theatre.
