have Chronic Kidney Disease (CKD), prostate cancer, and other disorders that cause decreasing strength of the pelvic floor, which results in Urinary Incontinence (UI). According to a 2022 study conducted using National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey (NHANES) data, over 37% of women patients surveyed as a part of the study had stress UI, 22% had urgency UI, 31.3% had mixed symptoms, and over 9% were recorded with unspecific incontinence.

Estimates from the same study suggest 22.1% prevalence rate of severe and moderate urinary continence among women in the United States, which corresponds to over 28 million individuals. Rapid innovations, resulting in manufacture and sales of unisex paper-based biodegradable urine bags, and increasing preference among home care patients to use disposable urine bags are some factors expected to boost revenue growth of the global disposable urinary market during the forecast period.
