new artificial intelligence-driven security risk identification system. This innovative technology uses machine learning algorithms to detect patterns in data and pinpoint potential security risks.

By leveraging AI, Amax Fire & Security can provide customers with a more comprehensive approach to security that helps them protect their premises and assets. The new system allows customers to identify potential threats from a variety of sources such as surveillance footage, access control systems, employee records, and more. This technology is designed to quickly identify suspicious activities before they can escalate into serious incidents. Additionally, the system provides detailed analytics that enables customers to take proactive measures to mitigate any identified security risks.
