

2023 Los Angeles Times Festival of Books presents Rosa the Little Ant and The Great Big Elephant by Dainty Nix

A Tale of Courage and Determination Teaches Young Readers That You Don't Have to Be Big to Be Brave

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, April 17, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Dainty Nix's encouraging children's book is perfect for young readers to hone their sense of determination and resilience. Rosa the Little Ant and the Great Big Elephant narrates the journey of Rosa as she stands up and protects her village. Dainty Nix's work will grace the annual Los Angeles Times Festival of Books this April 22 and 23, 2023.

Dainty Nix was born in Jamaica and now lives with her family in the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania. She has a master's degree in education; now, she is an adjunct instructor at Northampton Community College. Dainty Nix is set to receive a certificate in children's book writing from UC San Diego Extension.

Rosa, the little ant, and her ant friends were enjoying their day when a herd of elephants trampled their village. Even though they were devastated of the incident, Rosa remained optimistic and encouraged her ant friends to build a village up in the tree. Not thinking of any danger, they lived peacefully in their new village.

One day, Rosa was out doing her usual routine when she realized that an elephant was feeding on the branches of the tree where their village is. Then and there, Rosa gathered all her courage to stop the elephant. Will Rosa be able to stop the big elephant? Will Rosa save and protect her village and friends?
