

2023 Los Angeles Times Festival of Books presents Code Name: Juggernaut by Sherman E. Ross

A Madman's weapon of mass destruction, his murderous consort, FBI agent in pursuit, city/nation in peril, bizarre plot bearing the Code Name: JUGGERNAUT.

LOS ANGELES, CA, UNITED STATES, April 19, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In a compelling, action-packed novel that depicts a possible America in the near future, a heinous cult of violent extremists seek to annihilate the federal government— and to destroy the country with it.

“In the shimmering haze of a clear midwinter evening Howard could plainly make out his target: the broad dome of the US Capitol Building less than half a mile away. Just beyond that lay the limestone edifices of the Evert Dirksen Senate Office Building and the Sam Rayburn House Office Building. He checked his watch: it was 4:22 pm. In less than three hours the government of the United States would be no more...”

— An excerpt from Sherman E. Ross’ Code Name: Juggernaut

Sherman E. Ross’ gripping tale of domestic terrorism is part of Author Press’ exhibition in one of the highly sought-after book festivals in the country. Code Name: Juggernaut will be showcased in the 2023 Los Angeles Times Festival of Books scheduled for April 22-23, 2023.

In the book, Howard Brennan, a deranged former U.S. Air Force colonel and nuclear engineer, seeks vengeance against the federal government for destroying his career. With the help of his lover, Jacqueline Lynch (Jack-L) and Werewolf, a band of domestic terrorists, they devise a plan that could permanently cripple the nation and its way of life. The plotters cross paths with Douglas Rabson, a relentless, dedicated FBI agent who uncovers the plot and races to foil the ultimate nightmare.
