"It's an honor to be recognized by the Colorado Companies To Watch organization as a finalist this year. This honor speaks to our commitment to excellence, innovation, and progress," said Katie Wafer-Gillberg, Hydrate IV Bar Founder and CEO. "We strive to create value for our customers and improve their lives through our products and services. We're very proud to share this meaningful recognition with our customers."

Since its founding in 2016, Hydrate IV Bar has become an integral part of the local business community. Hydrate IV Bar has created numerous jobs in Colorado, and its products and services have positively impacted the health and wellness industries. The Hydrate IV Bar team strives to stay ahead of the innovation curve and serves its customers with excellence.

"We are honored to be included among other up-and-coming companies in Colorado and look forward to the Finalist Reception and Expo this month," said Katy McIntyre, Marketing and Operations Director. "We want to thank everyone who has helped us reach this significant milestone, especially our team for their hard work and dedication!"

Hydrate IV Bar will join other innovative businesses at the CCWT's Reception and Expo, taking place on April 27 at the Hyatt Regency Denver Tech Center.

"Colorado Companies To Watch celebrates the business leaders and entrepreneurs who are driving innovation and economic growth in our state," said Kim Woodworth, the Board Chair of Colorado Companies To Watch. "The companies selected as finalists demonstrate a commitment to creating jobs, investing in their communities, and finding creative solutions to the challenges facing their industries."

For the past 15 years, CCTW has awarded 700 Colorado-based companies, which has resulted in a $5.8 billion economic impact across the state.

Woodworth adds, "We're proud to recognize companies such as Hydrate IV Bar for their efforts and look forward to celebrating their accomplishments at the Finalist Reception and Expo."

The reception will also feature a forum of keynote speakers, networking opportunities, and the recognition of finalists in front of an audience of more than 300 people.
