environment, which requires leaders to be both professional and human-centered; and also the right-to-the point panel “Preventive Wellness, A Driver of Psychological Safety” with Dr. Sarah Sarkis, Clinical Psychologist, Sr. Director of Performance Psychology, Exos as the moderator of a top-tier group of experts which highlighted strategies for creating a psychologically safe workplace by identifying factors for early intervention, the role of senior leaders in truly knowing their teams, and the tools and benefits available to employees. These presentations were between many more exciting and valuable discussions during both events.

The HR Leadership & Corporate Wellness Executive Summit allowed industry professionals to stay up-to-date on the latest trends and initiatives in the workplace wellness sphere. With a focus on topics ranging from Battling Burnout, The Public Sector’s Role in the Development and Implementation of Wellness Programs, and Creating a Magnetic Work Culture in 2023, attendees broaden their perspective and gain valuable insights into optimizing benefits design. As a platform for networking and sharing ideas, this Summit offered a first-rate professional experience for those invested in workplace wellness.

With 25 years of experience hosting global summits, Opal Group brought together two invitation-only events in Austin, Texas; Both summits provided a platform where innovative ideas and meaningful connections could be fostered. With the focus on practicality and immediate application of concepts at work, the event was a huge success. The experience was unforgettable, making the attendees eager to return for more.
