Smart packaging processes benefit manufacturers with better agility, quality, safety, and sustainability. The rising purchasing power, with the rapid growth of emerging economies, is changing consumer patterns worldwide. The expanding middle class in emerging countries is increasingly looking for safer, high-quality, and environmentally friendly products. Many companies are offering advanced packaging materials to address the growing demand from manufacturers. For instance, Dow, a global leader in plastics and packaging industries, offers cutting-edge packaging solutions. Its ASPUNTM MB Meltblown Fiber Resins help manufacturers address the increasing demand for softness and comfort while maintaining strength, durability, and processing efficiency. This product is proving to be an ideal nonwoven material for infant diapers, adult incontinence products, medical drapes and garments, and filtration products.
