The rise in awareness regarding vitamin supplements is expected to propel the growth of the biotin supplements industry. According to the report of the National Library of Medicine in the U.S., approximately 68% of adults use dietary supplements in 2019. Such huge usage of dietary supplements coupled with rise in awareness regarding the health benefits of dietary supplements is expected to drive the biotin supplement industry.

Animal-based protein sources like beef liver, chicken liver, salmon, and eggs have a high biotin content, and rise in demand for organic animal-based protein and surge in health consciousness coupled with increase in awareness regarding healthy food habits among the global population is encouraging consumers to choose organic food products, which can hamper the growth of the market. Rise in alcohol consumption is expected to create a biotin supplement market opportunity as alcoholism can lead to biotin deficiency.

According to the biotin supplement market size, the hair care segment held the largest market share in 2021. Due to the rise in hair damage accounting for pollution and other reasons such as hair coloring, people are constantly spending money on hair care products, which is expected to accelerate the expansion of the hair care industry. Moreover, the keratin structure is kept stable by biotin, which encourages hair development. Furthermore, growing interest in hair nourishing and hair treatments among young people is expected to create a wealth of economic prospects for industry players in the coming years.
