Pisco-based cocktails, such as Andean Dusk, Club cocktail, double gape, Dulchin, Mosquito, Paddington Bear Martini, Pincecone, Pini, Pisco Kid, and Pisco punch, among others, are gaining traction across restaurants, bars and pubs. Over the forecast period, the increasing disposable income, rising number of alcohol consumers, rapid urbanisation, and enhanced interest in new types of beverages are expected to fuel the pisco market. Further, the changing preference of consumers towards traditional crafted spirits is another crucial driving factor of the market. Crafted spirits such as La Diablada Pisco, Macchu Pisco, and Carvado Acholado Pisco, among others, are catching the eye of young consumers.

Pisco Industry Definition and Major Segments

Pisco refers to an alcoholic beverage which is considered to be a form of brandy and is made from fermented grape juices that are distilled. It can be yellow or amber in colour or colourless and has origins in Peru and Chile. The aroma of this beverage is stronger than its taste, and it is considered smooth with grape-flavoured notes. It can be semi-sweet or dry and is widely utilised in cocktails.
