Market Overview

Physical Therapy Market is valued 27 billion in 2022 and expected to reach USD 46.79 billion by 2032 growing at a CAGR of 6.3% during the forecast period from 2023 to 2032

Physical therapy is a combination of techniques that are used to reduce pain and restore mobility to injured body parts, such as joints and limbs. Physical therapy can give people with serious musculoskeletal or neuromuscular disorders, whether they are genetically inherited or acquired, a new lease on life. Patients who have undergone joint replacement surgeries or muscle repair surgeries, which require a prolonged period of immobilization, can also benefit from physical therapy. The need to assess and treat biophysical problems of premature infants and trauma or stroke victims has increased as a result of advances in medicine.

Physical Therapy Market: Trends and Drivers

Physical therapy is based on simple massage and movement techniques. However, the market has a variety of specialized instruments that can be used to provide more effective pain relief. The demand for physical therapy is increasing. Below are some of the top factors that will impact the market in the future.

- Falls are common in both indoor and outdoor environments, as the geriatric population grows. It is the natural result of aging joints that leads to an increased need for physical therapy.
- The number of injuries related to sports and physical activity is increasing as more people participate in these activities. The market is growing rapidly.
- The physical services industry will be adversely affected by the surgical replacement of joints that cause chronic pain and inability to move. However, physical therapy is often used to help the patient return to normal function as soon as possible.
