Sustainable Prefab Builder MASAYA HOMES Launches Accessory Dwelling Units (ADU) Projects Across West Coast

Masaya Homes, a new Bay Area building company that makes homes entirely out of wood grown in reforestation projects, is launching projects across the West Coast and will open its Berkeley showroom in late May.

For us to be able to get what we wanted, get the design we wanted, and know that it had a positive impact on our global climate made the decision very easy.”

— Suzanne, Marin County CA

Masaya Homes builds boutique prefab studios, offices and Accessory Dwelling Units (ADUs) using durable teak wood it grows on previously deforested cowpastures in Nicaragua— employing a “seedling to dwelling” business model to produce the most sustainable prefab ADUs on the market and capture thousands of tons of carbon in the process.

Masaya Homes, which already received writeups in The Oregonian and The Press Democrat, offers solutions to both the housing and the climate crisis: creating small, well designed dwelling units out of wood that it produces from 1.2 million planted trees, boosting carbon capture and sequestration in the process.

The company began reforestation in 2008 and started MasayaCo furniture in 2014. The goal of Masaya Homes and Furniture is to turn all wood grown in the reforestation projects into lifetime quality products. The Berkeley store will showcase both brands together in a sustainable lifestyle experience.

Masaya Homes offers 7 turnkey floor plans ranging from 120 sq. ft outdoor studios to 3 BR, 2 BA, 1200 sq. ft. well-designed homes. Its designs use a panelized system to fit specific customer needs and maximize lot views. In addition to floor layouts, MasayaCo furniture for home buyers will be on display at the company's new Berkeley showroom opening in May.

Co-Founders Aram Terry and Olin Cohan met while in the Peace Corps in Nicaragua more than 20 years ago. "Planting trees is at the center of our company: customers keep a Masaya Home unit or a MasayaCo product for life," says Terry. "Timeless design, sustainable materials, and craftsmanship provide opportunities to make a difference in this world."

As prefab homes gain in popularity, Masaya Homes provides a sleek, ethical choice for buyers tired of particle board, plastic flooring, cheap drywall and other compromising materials. The company is powered by a love for design, the environment, and a desire to create sustainable economic opportunity—which is why it employs hundreds of Nicaraguans at every level, from reforestation at the company's tree farms to fabricating products.
