Named the “Nicest Place in Washington” by Reader’s Digest, in the past six years Bellden Cafe has not only provided healthy food and drinks to its customers, the Bellevue coffee shop has also donated 25% of the proceeds from more than 16,000 charity lattes, as well as offered over 2000 paid-volunteer hours to its employees. donating to organizations like Jubilee REACH, Overlake Hospital, and Vision House.

In its sixth year, the Bellevue cafe plans to expand its menu, launch its very own product lines, as well as found a nonprofit to increase its impact. The coffee shop will pour handmade candles in-house with scents that match the three charity drinks: the sweet honey and sharp cinnamon in the Let Me Love You Latte, the fresh scent of lavender like the herb-infused Spring Time Latte, and the warm winter aromas of the Home for the Holidays. All proceeds from these new products will be donated to Bellden Cafe's community partners. Additionally, every Thursday night various local leaders will gather to share and celebrate their contributions to the neighborhood.

Finally, Claire has partnered with Coava, Bellden's coffee roaster, to produce a single origin Columbian coffee line called Cascara Girls. All proceeds from this bag of beans will directly support a non-profit, The Bellden Life Project: an employee job readiness program that will offer all its paid interns — especially immigrant, refugee, and BIPOC youth — the opportunity to build communication skills, engage in community, and practice professional development. As a Chinese immigrant herself, Claire explains, "I felt I had lost a part of myself when I left China. My career helped me to find the confidence to succeed. Now I want to help bring the joy back to work by offering the opportunity for others to find home through the coffee, community, and charity provided by Bellden Cafe."
