According to CruiseBooking.com COO Abhesh Verma, the all-new Price Alert feature was created out of a demand from the company’s dedicated clients. “We noticed that many of our clients, both prospective clients and returning clients, were coming back to the website over and over to find a better deal on a previously researched cruise. Some people even contacted us to see if any rate drops had happened since they last researched a specific cruise they were interested in. We realized that our clients would greatly benefit from an automated system that let them know when prices had dropped on a cruise they wanted to go on. Our developers went to work quickly, and we're now rolling out this exciting feature. Our clients need to sign up to access this feature. Becoming a subscriber is free and easy."

CruiseBooking.com helps save cruisers money. Traditional cruise bookings tend to cost approximately $450 per person, but this expert team provides all-inclusive cruises at much lower rates. For instance, some of the West Mediterranean cruises at CruiseBooking.com start at $49 per person. Millions of people embark on cruises each year. Now, CruiseBooking.com is helping them get the best deals possible. Anyone who wants to cruise on a budget can get tailored alerts sent directly to their inbox. All they need to do is visit the CruiseBooking.com website and sign up to receive Price Alert features anytime rates drop on a cruise they are interested in.
