In-vitro transcription (IVT) templates are DNA or RNA molecules that serve as templates for the production of RNA molecules in an in-vitro transcription reaction. In-vitro transcription is a laboratory technique used to produce RNA molecules from a DNA template in a test tube, outside of a living cell.

IVT templates are typically designed to include a promoter sequence that can be recognized by RNA polymerase, the enzyme responsible for synthesizing RNA. When an IVT template is mixed with RNA polymerase and other necessary components, such as nucleotides and buffer solutions, RNA molecules are produced that are complementary to the DNA sequence of the template.
