Behavior tracking is a method that allows caregivers to identify and document behavior patterns in individuals with dementia. By tracking these behaviors, caregivers can identify any unmet needs and address them before they lead to challenging behavioral issues. The training provided by NurseMotherCaregiver.com and ABC Dementia will equip caregivers with the knowledge and skills to effectively track and manage these behaviors.

"The partnership with ABC Dementia is an exciting opportunity for us to offer a valuable resource to dementia family caregivers," said Cindy Rogers, CEO of NurseMotherCaregiver.com. "We recognize the challenges that come with caring for a loved one with dementia, and we are committed to providing caregivers with the necessary support to ensure that their loved ones receive the best care possible."

The behavior tracking training is completely free of charge and will be offered online through the ABC Dementia platform. Caregivers will have access to expert advice, resources, and support throughout the training process.
