SAN DIEGO, CALIFORNIA, USA, May 10, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- When it comes to finding a used refurbished hospital bed there are many models to choose from and knowing which one is best for home use and home care or long term care can be challenging. Many times patients and their families are given beds from insurance providers which are not able to provide the level of patient care needed for each medical condition. This can be a semi electric bed that requires a crank to raise up and down, a poor quality mattress or even a bed deck that is made of springs and not solid. In all of these cases upgrading to a hospital grade bed can make all the difference and provide a higher level of patient care for the individual in bed and assistance for the caregivers.

Finding a durable used refurbished hospital bed model for home care can be challenging. At GMG Medical Equipment we help consult with caregivers, nursing and long term care to find the best bed model.”

The used refurbished hospital bed market has gained in popularity as more families decide to keep loved ones at home for long term care and the rise in baby boomers needing home care grows. Hospital beds new can be at least fifty percent more than buying used and there are many added benefits a hospital grade bed can provide including added comfort, support and features. With reconditioned medical beds growing in popularity GMG Medical Equipment is also seeing more requests coming in from skilled nursing, long term care and post acute care companies as well. Being able to tend to the needs of patients at high risk of getting bed sores and pressure wounds is one of the specialty type of beds that the company provides. This is usually done with a high quality air mattress system which with low air loss and alternating pressure features can help dry up or prevent a bed sore condition. There has also been a growing demand to export hospital beds to Mexico and Africa since the countries in South America and Africa keep expanding and adding more hospitals and medical clinics.

Some of the most expensive ICU or acute care beds offered include the Hill Rom P1900 Totalcare Sport 2 and also the Hill Rom P7500 Progressa bed models. These two bed models are the only air mattress beds that can sit into a full chair position, laterally turn the patients left and right
