A local author and religious leader from Soweto took the stage and announced that, “The coming together of different religions for an all-inclusive interfaith workshop for the betterment of all makes his dream of a better society very real.” This was followed by intense training on skills training on subjects such as conflict management, social and spiritual counselling, tackling drug abuse, barriers to education and many more covered by the Scientology Volunteer Minister’s Tools for Life Skills Development Program.

Sandile Hlayisi, from the Scientology Volunteer Ministers who conducted the training said “With the decline of morality seen in society and the weight this adds on the pastor’s shoulders, we decided to do these workshops frequently to show religious leaders that they can co-exist and even work together to help their communities despite their spiritual beliefs. In previous seminars, many others have commented about the importance of these types of events.”

“ It is true that there are many conflicts amongst Churches and we have different ideas but at the end of the day, we are all affected by the same societal issues. Problems do not discriminate and they affect us all. It would be much more beneficial if we all worked together in solving the high crime rate, drugs, declining morals, gender based violence and more that are destroying our country”, added Hlayisi.

Ms. Mcwabe, who drove all the way from North West expressed her extreme gratitude and said “I am overwhelmed and out of words to describe today. I cannot thank you enough and I don’t think I will ever have words to thank you enough. What you have done for us today has restored hope to our lives. We come from a devastated community in need of this knowledge. I was in tears for a bit because it finally feels like God has answered our prayers.”

According to Hlayisi, these workshops have been attended by thousands of religious leaders were all empowered with the Tools for Life skills development program authored by L. Ron Hubbard. These simple practical courses can help restore self-confidence, moral regeneration, being industrious, handling problems at work and more. “Applied in life, these courses have demonstrated to be capable of changing conditions,” concluded Hlayisi.
