HR organization should know before engaging in an HR information systems (HRIS) optimization project. This is the fifth podcast-style, micro-webinar in Bright Talent's rapid change management series.

"With economic concerns and shrinking budgets, rather than rip and replace their technology many HR organizations are looking to optimize their current HR information systems," said Brenan German, founder and president of Bright Talent. "The most daunting step can be knowing where to start. We unpack that for you and provide actionable advice for making the most of the HR systems and vendor relationships you already have."

This highly interactive, Q&A-style webinar discusses a range of HRIS optimization topics, including:

- How do an effective gap analysis that identifies your needs and priorities and builds a business case for change
- Best practices for managing an HRIS optimization project through completion
- Ways to repurpose existing functions to save costs and optimize results
- How to engage with your systems vendors so they provide the support you need and become allies working for your success
