Luke and Charis Burrett, driven by their shared belief in the healing potential of cannabis, founded Medicine Women LA as a testament to their visionary approach. Luke, an accomplished entrepreneur and designer, brought his branding and marketing expertise to the forefront, playing a pivotal role in shaping the brand's distinctive identity. Charis, a highly successful businesswoman, mother and the acclaimed Playboy Playmate of February 2003, spearheaded the brand's mission to offer safe, affordable, and premium plant-based remedies to individuals seeking alternative forms of healing. Together, Luke and Charis have steered Medicine Women LA to the forefront of the Southern California, cannabis industry, combining their entrepreneurial acumen and unwavering dedication to providing high-quality wellness solutions.

Medicine Women LA began its journey in 2015 as a non-profit delivery service, driven by Luke and Charis Burrett's belief in the medicinal benefits of cannabis. Their commitment to making a positive impact in the community propelled the brand forward. As they witnessed the positive impact cannabis had on patients' lives, they were inspired to expand their efforts. This led to the evolution of Medicine Women LA into a fully licensed cannabis brand and dispensary, catering to customers' diverse needs.

Luke Burrett's entrepreneurial success extends beyond Medicine Women LA. Prior to his involvement in the cannabis industry, Luke founded and led Silver Star, a renowned clothing brand known for its edgy designs and streetwear aesthetic. The brand gained global recognition and became a favorite among fashion enthusiasts. Luke's expertise in branding, market research, and strategy development provided a solid foundation for his subsequent ventures. Luke's entrepreneurial journey has been characterized by his ability to recognize opportunities and build successful ventures.
