We are dedicated to building a platform that gives conservatives and people of faith a voice.”

Eric Mitchell

CEO Lucie Mitchell expressed her enthusiasm about this expansion, stating, "We are thrilled to introduce podcast placements to our range of services. At LifeFlip Media, we are committed to showcasing the stories and successes of women entrepreneurs. With this new addition, we can provide them with a powerful platform to amplify their voices and reach wider audiences. We believe in empowering and inspiring others through our media solutions, and podcast placements are an ideal way to achieve that."

LifeFlip Media President and media expert Eric Mitchell commented on the agency's broader vision, saying, "We are dedicated to building a platform that gives conservatives and people of faith a voice. The launch of our podcast placement services is just one of the many exciting announcements we have in store for this summer. Our goal is to create opportunities for like-minded individuals to share their stories and perspectives through various media channels."

LifeFlip Media is a veteran-owned and female-led agency that prides itself on serving conservative businesses and influencers. With their extensive experience and expertise, they have successfully positioned clients in notable national media outlets, generating widespread recognition and increased brand visibility. The addition of podcast placements further strengthens their commitment to providing a comprehensive range of media and marketing solutions.

As the media landscape continues to evolve, LifeFlip Media remains at the forefront of industry trends, helping their clients navigate the dynamic digital landscape and effectively reach their target audiences. With their podcast placement services, they will connect entrepreneurs, thought leaders, and influencers with popular podcasts, enabling them to share their expertise, insights, and stories with engaged listeners.
