"Last year was another stellar year for many of our homebuilders no matter what roadblocks were placed in front of them," said Don Faye, principal of Presidio Residential Capital. "We're impressed with the results these homebuilding professionals have achieved – from those constructing the homes at the building sites to the tenacity of the sales professionals – and lists such as these prove their hard work has paid off."

This is the fifth year Central Valley community homebuilder San Joaquin Valley Homes has made one of Builder's lists, which is typically dominated by large private and public builders. The builder climbed 24 spots from last year's ranking of 118 to 94. It closed 618 homes and earned $250 million in gross revenue.

Williams Homes, headquartered in Santa Clarita, ranked 132 on Builder's The Next 100 list with 388 closings and $252 million in gross revenue.

Each year, Builder magazine releases its ranking of the top 100 homebuilding companies in the United States based on how many homes were closed the previous year. Those that rank 101 to 200 are recognized on the Builder Next 100 List.

Earlier this year Home Builder Executive, which releases its own top 100 list, ranked San Joaquin Valley Homes at 60th among private homebuilders and 84th among both private and public builders. These ratings were a result of closings in 2022 for the homebuilders who participated in their survey.
