Through a public statement, the representatives of Ucayali expressed their gratitude to the American diplomat for her visit to the region, which included her presence in the neighboring communities of Nueva Requena and business development centers.

In this statement, the representatives of Ucayali highlighted the courageous presence of Ambassador Kenna, as it shows the interest of the American people in Amazonian families and their desire to know the truth and the reality in which the native peoples of Ucayali live.

They stressed the need to work in peace and achieve an adequate territorial order, promoting sustainable and inclusive economic activities, framed within a regulatory framework that defends the interests of the region. In this sense, they expressed their disagreement with the organizations that do not represent them and that only seek to defend their own interests instead of those of the Amazonian populations.

In addition, they invite all individuals and institutions interested in sustainable development and forest preservation to visit the region and engage in direct dialogue with its people, in order to
