

Activist Rodrigo Barnes, NFL Super Bowl Champion and Trailblazing Rice University 'First Four' Hall of Famer, Dies at 73

Rodrigo Barnes, a trailblazing NFL player and outspoken civil rights activist among the first to integrate Rice University's sports program, dies at 73.

DALLAS, TEXAS, UNITED STATES, May 19, 2023 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Rodrigo Barnes, an outspoken Oakland Raiders Super Bowl Champion and trailblazing Rice University Athletic Hall of Famer died Tuesday, May 16, at the age of 73. Barnes, a former linebacker for the National Football League (NFL) who is often compared to Colin Kaepernick, broke racial barriers, including at Rice University where he was a member of the highly-esteemed 'First Four' at Rice University - the first African American student athletes, including Stahle' Vincent, Mike Taylor, and LeRoy Marion, to integrate the university's sports program in the fall of 1968.

Former Linebacker Rodrigo Barnes During His First Stint with the Dallas Cowboys

Known for his strong stance against racial inequality on and off the football field throughout his career, Barnes was a leader of several protests at Rice, co-founding the university's Black Student Union, and advocating for the hiring of more African American professors. During his sophomore year, Barnes was named the SWC's sophomore defensive player of the year and two years later UPI would name him the conference's defensive player of the year.

In 1973, Barnes was selected by the Dallas Cowboys in the seventh round of the NFL draft. Becoming the second African American linebacker in the franchise's history, Barnes was released from the Cowboys after suffering a knee injury later that year and would go on to play for several other teams including the New England Patriots, the Miami Dolphins, and the Oakland Raiders where he won a Super Bowl XI ring in 1976 under legendary coach John Madden. He retired from football in 1977 and became a general manager and coach in the United Football League.

Barnes, who released his memoir The Bouncing Football: Life Lessons on the Gridiron (Fulton Books) in 2021 and was recently honored at Rice in 2022, initially made his mark in high school as a highly-regarded athlete before making history as a no-nonsense civil rights activist and football player at Rice and in the NFL. A native of Waco, Texas, Barnes excelled in football and track-and-field at the segregated Carver High School before earning 3A second-team All-State honors and a football scholarship to Rice.

Rodrigo Barnes During Oakland Raiders Game

"1968. Let's think about it. The world was a different world. Rice University was one of many universities that were trying to put out the big lie. The big lie was centuries old saying that Black people could not accomplish too much. The answer in the textbook was that I was inferior. The preachers preached that I was inferior. Everything was, "I was inferior." We took on that challenge because for some reason the Bible said that we w[ere] equal, and so we put our heart in that," said Barnes at the 50th anniversary celebration of his and other African American student athlete's accomplishments held in 2022.

“

...The big lie was centuries old saying that Black people could not accomplish too much...We took on that challenge because...the Bible said that we w[ere] equal, and so we put our heart in that.”

Rodrigo Barnes

A third-generation descendant of the Shelton family who founded a historic settlement in 1874 on what is now known as Berry College's Possum Trot in Rome, Georgia, Barnes would return to college at Prairie View A & M earning a master's in education, with certifications in guidance and counseling and midmanagement. Most recently, he served as a high school assistant principal at the Garland Alternative Education Center in Dallas, Texas. Barnes leaves behind four children, including daughters Recca Shabazz, a former sports broadcaster in Waco, Texas and Tonya Feggett of Dallas, Texas in addition to sons Paul Garrett and Terrence Monroe, also of Dallas, Texas. A public memorial service (black tie) in celebration of Barnes' life will take place in Waco, Texas during the weekend of June 17-19. More details are forthcoming. The public can check the family's Instagram page, @1874SheltonFamilySettlement, or their Facebook page, Shelton Family Settlement at Possum Trot, for updates about the memorial.

Reca Shabazz

Media Contact /Family Representative

email us here

Visit us on social media:

Facebook

Instagram

This press release can be viewed online at: <https://www.einpresswire.com/article/634538854>

EIN Presswire's priority is source transparency. We do not allow opaque clients, and our editors try to be careful about weeding out false and misleading content. As a user, if you see something we have missed, please do bring it to our attention. Your help is welcome. EIN Presswire, Everyone's Internet News Presswire™, tries to define some of the boundaries that are reasonable in today's world. Please see our Editorial Guidelines for more information.

© 1995-2023 Newsmatics Inc. All Right Reserved.