Brat Fest holds a rich history rooted in a humble beginning. In 1983, Tom Metcalfe and his wife, Margaret, started a small brat fry as a gesture of gratitude to their grocery store customers. Over the years, the demand for their mouth-watering bratwursts grew exponentially. Embracing their community-oriented values, the Metcalfe's began donating the proceeds to organizations supported by volunteer sausage servers.

The festival's popularity soared, leading to its proclamation as the "World's Largest Brat Fest" in 1999. Since then, the event has continued to break records, with a staggering 189,432 brats sold in 2004. In 2005, Brat Fest found a new home at Willow Island, located at the Alliant Energy Center, to accommodate the ever-increasing crowds. The festival has been recognized as the "Best Outdoor Festival" by Madison.com readers in 2008, 2009, and 2010.

Brat Fest's success is also indebted to Johnsonville, the official brat sponsor since 2001. Johnsonville's generous donation of 150,000 brats in 2006 solidified its partnership with the festival. In 2011, Johnsonville took their support a step further by donating all brats served at Brat Fest, ensuring the event's continued success in giving back to the community.

Scotty Austin's journey in the music industry is a testament to his dedication and undeniable talent. As the former frontman of the multi-platinum rock band Saving Abel, he embarked on a solo career that quickly gained momentum. His rendition of Billy Idol's "Rebel Yell" reached impressive positions on Billboard and Foundation Charts. Scotty's success continued with his involvement in various projects, including collaborations with renowned producers and musicians in Nashville.
