Biohazard trash cans, also known as biohazard waste containers, are specialized containers designed to safely store and dispose of biomedical waste or biohazardous materials. These trash cans are specifically designed to minimize the risk of contamination and ensure the safe handling and disposal of potentially infectious or hazardous waste generated in healthcare facilities, research laboratories, or other settings where biohazardous materials are present.

Biohazard trash cans are typically constructed from durable materials, such as heavy-duty plastic or stainless steel, to withstand the rigors of handling and transportation. They feature a sturdy, leak-proof design with tight-fitting lids or openings that prevent the escape of potentially harmful substances. The cans are labeled with universally recognized biohazard symbols and color-coded, usually red or orange, to easily identify their purpose and alert individuals to the potential hazards associated with the contents.
